Each card has a number of relationships to other users, or groups, or articles, or any other resource type. So for example, the front page of the application could have a list of all the cards a user is subscribed to. The user could have a number of personal cards, which relate to one other user card, one group card and one article card. Each of these would be represented by a nested resource in the database, where an individual card has a user id and the other two are group and article ids. The problem I'm having is that when I want to link to a nested resource, the method I have setup doesn't appear to work. So this will work: but this will not: The error message I get is: unexpected keyword_end, expecting keyword_do or ';' or ' ' I have tried the following but to no avail. cards_path(:users)) %> I would be grateful for any suggestions. I would really like the nested resources as I don't want to have to make a database call for each card every time I make a query. A: it's because cards_path(:users) has an extra parameter: users.cards_path(:users, @card) should work. Ask HN: How to buy a domain? - mynameisraj I am looking to buy a name to sell web apps on. I have looked at the big guys like GoDaddy and Namecheap.com but am a bit fuzzy on how it works.
