You can load the initial user information directly from the Internet (via HTTP request) or store it into a local file. Subsequently, you can load the user information from the local file and continue to use it (without internet connection). Soxilite is an XML-based web service that allows you to create personalized websites and web pages, sharing pages for a peer of your choosing or a community. The service enables users to create web pages according to the web standards (HTML, CSS and XHTML), as well as to create their own skinned menu of page links. Zooop is an open-source photo sharing service written in python using the Zope and Django web frameworks. It features a web gallery, a search engine and a discussion forum. It's designed to be able to import user-generated photos from Flickr and to offer a single gallery interface to a variety of photo sharing services. We've decided to make a special post with Bincode. We have all the best tools for weblogs. You can see a list of them on the sidebar. Bincode is an open source development platform for the Spanish language. Written in PHP, it uses MySQL and javascript to provide the most effective solutions for webloggers. We have collected a list of the most useful tools that we have tested. We hope that you like this list as much as we do. We look forward to hearing your suggestions. The Zoo is a free open source photo management system written in the Perl programming language, and is licensed under the GNU Public License. It consists of a webserver, a database server, and a utilities package for web content creation (writing text, HTML, and so on). The database server is itself a database management tool. The web server is used for two main purposes: serving the public web site and holding the database. Other application-specific services (e.g. image thumbnailer) are also provided. The Zoo is the successor of his predecessor, ZOIC, and is designed to be both easy and fast to use. It is written from
