OpenPgp is a source of ephemeral public key. This enables users to encrypt data securely and then share it with multiple recipients. To access this feature, you need to use a free PGP suite that provides OpenPGP server on different platforms. Softether is a security suite of open-source software, providing a PGP email encryption, secure (https) browsing, secure instant messaging (S/MIME) email encryption, and secure online shop (https). It is created by the Telenet Consortium. Aeris is a full-featured PGP email, file, and calendar encryption, providing a web-based interface with automatic PGP key management, confidentiality and integrity of data, encryption of E-mails, passwords, and more. gpg is a command line utility and a key management application for GNU/Linux, Unix and DOS operating systems. gpg is written in ANSI C and is free software. Open PGP Suite is a software suite that provides both PGP encryption and PGP key management. Some of its main features are: PGP encryption of E-mails and OpenPGP-compatible keys. PGP keys are managed by the system through a set of wizards. The software supports PGP public-key encryption/decryption, PGP identification, PGP tokenization, PGP audio and video files. PKI certificates are managed by the suite. The application also supports PGP configuration and the import/export of PGP keys. Identity Protection Suite (IPS) is a security suite providing PKI-based authentication and encryption. It is developed by Cerna LLC and is an add-on for the Firefox browser. IPS supports OpenPGP, PGP, S/MIME, and X.509-based authentication and encryption. IPS is free software. Q: Pagination with Infinite Scroll I have an infinite scrolling script that works like a charm... Unfortunately if there is no data to scroll through i'm left with one giant image. Is there a way for me to change my script to paginate, or, even better, to show a loading image while this data loads? $$(document).ready(function () { var myVariable = Math.ceil(Math.random() * 2000); $$('#pages').load('getsomedata.php?var=' + myVariable); $$(window).load(function () {$$$
