
Saudi Prince Hacks Amazon Jeff Bezos WhatsApp Number

Amazon founder Jeff Bezos' mobile phone was hacked after receiving a WhatsApp message sent from a number belonging to the Crown Prince of Saudi Arabia. It is reported by the news agency Associated Press. The unknown person who owned the hacked phone notified Bezos that he had received a message from the Avito website saying that he could buy a new car. Bezos, who is familiar with the principles of Whatsapp, took note of this message. According to him, he was interested in cars since childhood. At the time of sending the message, he was reading an advertisement for the sale of the car. As a result, this information was at the disposal of the site Aviton.com, which said that 40-year-old Bezos could become the owner of a Lamborghini car. According to ProPublica, the hacked number, which received a message from Avito and belonged to the Saudi prince, was registered to Latexy email. The Avito message said that it was sent to charitable organizations, and its author was the site's management. Representatives of the website Avitaativo said it was a scam and got the situation under control.
