I am trying to configure PhantomJS 1.9.7. This is what I did so far: First, I did a `sudo update-alternatives --install /usr/bin/phantomjs phantomjs /path-to-phantomjs-executable` This created a symlink `phantombjs` to `phantombjs-1.9.7` I then set the path in the `/usr/bin/phantomjs`. This is what I did: `rm /usr/bin/phantomjs mv /path-to-phantomjs-executable/phantomjs /usr/bin/phantomjs` I also tried to change the `/usr/bin/phantomjs` file to use the absolute path for `phantomjs` instead of the path. I also tried to unset the `PATH` environment variable. Any ideas? A: Thanks for the help, I figured out the issue. Thanks to this blog post: The solution was to create a file `phantomjs-user-bin` in `/opt/phantomjs-1.9.7` and set the `PATH` variables to include that dir. I added the following to my `~/.bashrc`: `export PATH=$PATH:/opt/phantomjs-1.9.7/bin` Q: python3 and django3.1.1 - import local image I was having some trouble with this. I am running a Django site that has an image on it (it is powered by a.png file). The image was saved in python3 user directory - `[xxx@xxx xxx]$ ls __pycache__ app1.py static` Everything was just great when I ran `Django project - everything worked as expected. [xxx@xxx xxx]$ python3 manage.py runserver` Valid 1cb139a0ed
