A rapid and reproducible high-performance liquid chromatographic (HPLC) method for the resolution of two 6-O-desulfo-lipoic acid-nitrogen adducts (LPLNAs) was developed using a reversed-phase C18 column with gradient elution in a methanol-water mobile phase containing 0.1% acetic acid and 5-10 mM NH₄OAc. The protocol allows the resolution of two 6-O-desulfo-LPLNAs from a complex extract. The compounds detected in the LPLNAs fraction were identified as 6-O-desulfo-1,2-diamino-3-O-(sulfosuccinimido)ethane-lipoic acid and 6-O-desulfo-1,2-diamino-3-O-(sulfosuccinimido)ethane-N-methyl-L-cysteine based on their UV absorption spectra and on the retention times obtained using several analytical methods, including HPLC, electrospray ionization (ESI)-MS and NMR. LPLNAs were purified by boronate affinity chromatography using a phenylboronate column.

Recovery of LPLNAs was estimated to be 25-30%. The method developed in this study can be used for the analytical scale preparation of the two 6-O-desulfo-LPLNAs from the common bean.

application I'm creating, there will be a lot of dialogs with different styled widgets, some of which should be collapsed by default. It seems to me that the only way to achieve this is to use the `setVisible(bool)` and `setCollapsed(bool)` methods on a widget and then set the collapsed state on the parent dialog. Is this the best approach? Are there alternatives? Is there any difference in how these methods behave when they're called on a widget inside a dialog versus when they're called on a widget that's a child of the dialog? A: GWT

Dialog, like other widgets in GWT, is built on top of the widget's native widget. In order to do the collapsible/expandable thing in the native widget, one has to call `setVisible` or `setCollapsed` to the widget
